WOULD YOU HOP ON BOARD?

The Parry People Mover in use in Stourbridge carries up to 60 people seated or standing and travels at about 20mph. Campaigners believe that it could be introduced to bring more visitors to Folkestone. The idea for the 'Shepway Metro' is the brainchild of The Remembrance Line Association, which is petitioning to bring the historic branch railway back into operation.

BY JAMES ALEXANDRE

A PLAN to introduce a 'Shepway Metro' system in Folkestone could see the harbour railway line back in use and encourage visitors.

The service would use the revolutionary Parry People Mover, described as a cross between a tram and a train, and run from the old Folkestone Junction station down to the harbour and Creative Quarter.

It could even be extended to the Leas Lift, bypassing the need to park in town while helping to keep the Victorian attraction in use.

The idea is the brainchild of The Remembrance Line Association, which is campaigning to bring the historic branch railway back into operation.

Richard Moffatt, director of the RLA, said: "We want to re-establish an interchange and introduce a park-and-ride where Folkestone Junction used to be.

"There is access from Wear Bay Road where you can have a small car park. With a single ticket you could park, get on the carriage and then go down the branch, possibly pausing to collect passengers at Warren Road or East Cliff, then at the harbour.

"It could then turn right and along Marine Parade to connect with the Leas Lift."

The Parry People Mover, designed by John Parry, uses flywheel technology, removing the need to electrify the line. It is already being used in Stourbridge in the West Midlands.

Mr Moffatt said: "The viaduct, the swing-bridge and the station, we believe, are main features in the heritage of the harbour area.

As Folkestone and Hythe prepares to go to the polls, we take a look at the candidates vying for your vote

Who do you want to represent you?

ELECTION 2010

Conservative: Damian Collins

History: Born in Northampton in 1974, he was the first of his family to go to university and studied history at Oxford. Has spent the last 12 years working in the advertising and communications industry, advising some of Britain's leading companies. Stood for the Tories in Northampton North in 2005, finishing second with just over 30 per cent of the vote. Selected as candidate to take over from Michael Howard in July 2006. Married to Sarah, with two young children, Claudia and Hugo, and lives in Elham.

Priorities: Promoting local business and creating new jobs for people of all ages, realising benefits from the high-speed rail link, attracting tourism and investment in Folkestone's regeneration. Supporting local food and farming. In favour of new Dungeness power station and Lydd airport expansion to boost jobs.

Campaigns: Founding chairman of Folkestone-based Step Short project, working to restore the Road of Remembrance to focus on its crucial role in the First World War. Chairman of The Shed management committee, a centre supported by Folkestone Youth Project. Campaigned to keep post offices open.

Liberal Democrats: Lynne Beaumont

History: Lived in Shepway for more than 15 years, became a district councillor in 2003 and is the party's group leader. Represents Folkestone Park ward at both district level and on Folkestone Town Council. Selected as the party's Parliamentary candidate in January after Neil Matthews stepped down for personal reasons. Heavily involved in the successful Gurkha Justice Campaign. Husband Peter Carroll stood for the Lib Dems in 2005 and is the party's candidate in Maidstone.

Priorities: To bring jobs and prosperity to the constituency, realise the green-tourism potential of Romney Marsh, keep open local pubs, shops and post offices and keep a sense of community. Encourage businesses to relocate from London using new rail links. Opposes Lydd airport expansion to protect Romney Marsh, concerned about nuclear waste being kept at Dungeness.

Campaigns: Supported fire-fighters when Folkestone faced cuts in crews and engines, campaigned to save services at the town's Royal Victoria Hospital. Opposed cuts in police numbers and protested against decision to close the Leas Lift. Promoting green tourism on Romney Marsh to create jobs.

YOUR CHOICE: Damian Collins, Frank McKenna, Donald Worsley and Lynne Beaumont

Labour: Donald Worsley

History: Experienced lawyer, aged 59, lives in Folkestone. Divorced with five grown-up children. Brought up in Coventry and studied law at Nottingham University. Spent three years in the Naval Reserve during the Falklands War. Became involved in politics in Coventry during 1970 general election, building up membership at local Labour Party branch there from five to almost 200. Supports both Nottingham Forest and Liverpool football clubs.

Priorities: Bringing jobs and prosperity to the area through a new power station at Dungeness, expanded Lydd airport, new harbour at Folkestone and a dedicated rail link into Romney Marsh. Better and more profitable farming and horticulture. Invest in education, infrastructure and major projects to build upon achievements with the two academies, sea defences at Dymchurch, the wind farm on Romney Marsh and the arrival of the high-speed rail link to Folkestone.

Campaigns: Supported the improved £60 million sea defences at Dymchurch which will protect almost 2,500 homes and plans for a new terminal and runway extension at Lydd airport which could create up to 500 jobs.

Frank McKenna: UKIP

History: Born in Northern Ireland, worked in London and the Channel Islands before emigrating to Australia. Gained experience over 24 years in mining, engineering and logistics. Started a small landscape business which led to him being appointed at the Perth Zoological Department and elected on to the trade-union movement. Moved to Folkestone in 1996 to be with family and friends, stood as a UKIP candidate in KCC elections last year. Has a passion for photography.

Priorities: Strike a balance between employment and retaining and improving environmental legacy of the coastline, countryside and Romney Marsh. Find a sensible solution to Operation Stack and prevent pubs and post offices being closed.

Campaigns: In favour of local referenda to decide local issues such as the construction of a new nuclear power station at Dungeness, expansion of Lydd airport and waste-recycling plant at Sellindge. Roll all existing state pensions credit, winter fuel allowance into a flat-rate, non-means tested 'citizen's pension' of £130 per week. Stop paying the EU £45 million per day, take back control of Britain's borders and bring power to make UK laws back to Westminster.

Protest calls for halt to MPs' 'job for life' in Lords

DRESSED in mock robes and wigs, together with a mask of Michael Howard, protestors handed in a petition against the MP's possible peerage last week.

The campaigners from the Power 2010 pressure group gathered outside Conservative Party offices in Folkestone in a targeted move aimed at those retiring politicians likely to be elevated to the House of Lords.

Mr Howard, as a former Leader of the Opposition and ex-Home Secretary, is rumoured to be one of the front-runners when he steps down at the General Election after 27 years as an MP.

But the group believes all future appointments must be halted and voters should decide who sits in the second chamber.

George Gabriel, who was one of those who donned the fake ermine on Friday, said: "We're here to highlight the fact that Michael Howard, although he may be standing down at the coming election, shows every likelihood of going to the House of Lords.

"So he'll have a seat there for the rest of his days and we think there should be some kind of public debate around that.

■ BY JAMES ALEXANDRE

"In this day and age, it's out of fashion and quite frankly absurd for people to be sitting in a place to which they haven't been elected and continue to make laws for everyone else to follow."

Sam Wilson, who wore a cardboard cut-out mask of Mr Howard with his costume, said: "The reception so far has been pretty good - we've got people stopping and staring at me in the street.

"People may appreciate their MP, but they don't think they should be going into an unelected position for life."

Manifesto

The mocked-up peers, one of whom was wearing a Lord Ashcroft mask, then presented a 7,000-signature petition to Mr Howard's agent Gordon Williams at the offices in Westcliff Gardens.

The Folkestone and Hythe MP told KOS Media that he was broadly in favour of the group's aims.

Mr Howard said: "I am in favour of an elected House of Lords and it was part of my manifesto at the last election.

"But since we don't have an elected House of Lords, I can't see any justifi-

PEER PROTEST: Campaigners wearing masks of Lord Ashcroft and MP Michael Howard want members of the House of Lords to be elected to their positions fication for freezing appointments to the present House."

Asked if he was indeed about to become a lord, Mr Howard replied: "I have no idea. I have not been approached and I have not been offered a seat in the House of Lords, and I don't know if I will be or not."

When Yourshepway asked him whether or not he would accept a seat if he was offered one, he said: "I would think about it at the time."

Sex attack lead after 16 years

AN INVESTIGATION into an assault in Folkestone that happened 16 years ago has been reopened by police after a new witness came forward.

The serious sexual assault happened in 1994 by the old Rotunda and the witness has helped produce an edit of a man police would like to talk to.

If you recognise this man, please phone PC Andy West at Folkestone police station on 01303 289254.

Otherwise, call 01622 690690 quoting FY/19904/09, or if you wish to remain anonymous phone Crimestoppers on 0800 555 111.

Metro proposal for Folkestone

"This is an economic, greener approach and we feel it would contribute largely to the regeneration of Folkestone."

He said the association was liaising with Network Rail over the status of the line, which has been mothballed for more than a year.

The possible reintroduction of fast passenger-ferry services to Boulogne could also be a direct beneficiary of the line's reopening, according to Mr Moffatt.

He said the service could be run by either a private operator or as a community partnership project.

A spokesman for The Folkestone Harbour Company, which owns and has a masterplan to develop the site, said: "The Parry People Mover proposal would have to be viable in its own right, without the requirement to retain the need for the present station site in Folkestone harbour."

Election delays decision on airport expansion plan

LYDD airport's expansion plans have been delayed yet again after the Government chose to defer the decision until after the election.

The date to decide whether Shepway council's approval of a new terminal building and runway extension should be called in for a public inquiry has been moved to Friday, June 11.

Lydd's managing director, Jonathan Gordon, said: "It's regrettable that our multi-million-pound investment plans, which will help boost the economic fortunes of Romney Marsh and create 500 jobs, are on hold again.

"We have spent more than four years and nearly £2 million in preparing our applications, which the members of Shepway council voted overwhelmingly to support at their meeting on March 3, so the prospect of waiting until the summer for a decision is exasperating. Despite this, we remain confident that the Secretary of State will agree we have a compelling case for allowing the controlled development of the airport."

Councillors voted 27-12 in favour of the plans last month in a meeting that heard from 17 speakers on all sides, including MP Michael Howard.

The Government's conservation body, Natural England, had advised against the applications and appealed the decision on environmental grounds.

Area manager Rob Cameron said: "If the Secretary of State agrees to Natural England's request, this could result in a public inquiry."

Louise Barton, of anti-expansion group LAAG, had earlier warned that a decision may not be made for another 18 months should a public inquiry be called.

STILL LIFE: Flora the mannequin 'at work' in Shane Record's Old High Street gallery - will she tempt in others?

Material World falls for Flora's artistic charm

A FOLKESTONE artist's brain-wave has seen him reach the top ten of a national radio competition to find the best amateur scientist.

Shane Record, who runs his own gallery in The Old High Street, said he was inspired to submit his entry after thinking about how best to attract passers-by to enter.

His proposal, for a behavioural study on how a person's presence can influence whether others choose to enter a building, involved placing a mannequin at the back of the gallery.

The figure, Flora, has caught people's attention as they have walked past while looking through the window, thinking it was a real person.

Mr Record told Yourshepway: "I was an academic before I was an artist, and science has always been one of my interests.

"I heard about this competition on the radio and knew they were looking for entries, so I signed up online. About 1,300 people entered and about a month ago I was told I was in the top 35.

"Then a couple of weeks ago I got a call to say

■ BY JAMES ALEXANDRE

I was in the top ten. I was absolutely amazed."

If he reaches the final four, Mr Record will have the chance to present his idea at the British Science Festival in Birmingham in September, with the winner having their findings sent to a science journal for peer review and possible publication.

He said: "I had to be creative and think about what can attract people into art galleries, especially with the recession we're going through. "Art is not necessarily the first thing that people need at times like these, so it was just a way of pursuing my interests.

"I do love painting, but I've also got a mortgage to pay and a baby on the way, so it's a case of how I can get people through the door. As they say, necessity is the mother of invention."

Mr Record is well known for adapting the red public telephone box at Folkestone harbour into an art exhibit; the box was mannequin Flora's previous home.

The finalists for the competition, which is hosted by the Material World programme on Radio 4, will be announced on air at 4.30pm on Thursday, April 22.

Yobs throw flaming bag in girl's face

POLICE are appealing for witnesses after an 11-year-old girl was hit in the face with a carrier-bag that had been set alight.

The girl stepped in when she saw a group of boys setting fire to plastic bags close to the zip-wire in Brabner Park, Folkestone, at the bottom of Dover Hill, between 7.45pm and 8.10pm on Friday.

When she told them to stop, they lit another bag and threw it in her face, leaving a burn injury just below her eye.

Two or three boys, aged 12 to 13, were setting light to the bags.

Police say other youngsters were in the park at the time and want to hear from anyone who saw what happened.

Acting Inspector Neil Minter said: "This was a nasty and extremely dangerous thing to do to a young girl.

"Officers have been making inquiries and I urge anyone with information about who these boys are to tell us.

"If you live in this area of Folkestone and are concerned about this incident or any problems with crime and antisocial behaviour, contact the Folkestone East Neighbourhood Team on 01303 289271."

If you can identify the boys, please phone PC Gemma Keeley on 01303 289406. If you have information but wish to remain anonymous, call Crimestoppers on 0800 555111.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Football tribute to a hero

A TRIBUTE to a Folkestone soldier who died in Afghanistan will be held at the town's football club next week.

The family of Rifleman Peter Aldridge have given their blessing to the event, which will see a minute's silence before Folkestone Invicta's match against Croydon Athletic and be preceded with a roll-call of organisations paying their respects.

The gate charge will be waived, making the match free to attend. The Aldridge family came to Folkestone from Croydon two years ago and the football club said the match was an opportunity to honour Peter's memory.

There will be a collection in aid of Help For Heroes. Spectators should arrive at the stadium in Cheriton Road by 7pm on Tuesday. Kick-off will be at 7.45pm.

Groups who wish to lend support can contact club chairman Lynn Woods by email at Lynn@adastra.com.

Brothel suspects arrested

TWO women have been arrested after police found evidence that a house in Folkestone was being used as a brothel.

A search warrant was executed in Victoria Grove on Tuesday, March 30, under the Misuse of Drugs Act. Officers allegedly found evidence the house was being used as a brothel. Cash, mobile phones, computers and business cards were seized.

Two women, aged 50 and 34, were arrested on suspicion of managing or assisting in the management of a brothel. They have been released on bail pending further inquiries.

Thief targets woman, 92

A 92-YEAR-OLD woman has had her bag snatched at a cashpoint in Folkestone.

The pensioner had just withdrawn cash from HSBC and was walking along Sandgate Road towards Sainsbury's when she was approached from behind by a man or teenager.

The thief grabbed her bag and ran down the alley beside the Sainsbury's delivery area into Manor Road and was followed by a youngster on a bicycle.

The incident happened on Tuesday, April 6, between 12.15pm and 12.45pm. Anyone with information is asked to phone PC Jacqueline Mennie on 01622 690690.

BNP's Diaries picture raises the spectre of 'lovable rogue' Clark

THE widow of the late Conservative politician Alan Clark has played down the fact that her husband's books appear in a promotional picture of BNP leader Nick Griffin.

■ BY NICK AMES

Castle, near Hythe, she said: "My late husband's work reached a very large audience. Everyone is entitled to read what they like. I think it's lovely that the books are still being sold."

Leading author Robert Harris said Mr Clark's accounts of political life had transformed him from a "sinister, adulterous, crypto-fascist" into a "lovable, roguish national treasure".

His historical writing also attracted acclaim, particularly his accounts of important episodes during the Second World War. But more recently his reputation suffered, notably for right-wing views that became more apparent in volumes of the Diaries that were published posthumously.

He once referred to Africa as "Bongo Bongo Land" and told Tory officials in Plymouth that the right-wing National Front would never put up a candidate against him as "they know I'm the nearest thing they're likely to get to an MP".

In a story published in The Times - following a recent biography of Mr Clark by Ion Trewin - former health minister Edwina Currie wrote: "His attitude to Hitler and the Nazis, however, put him beyond the pale, and to many of us it was a mystery how he ever came to be made a minister. It was more than being anti-Europe and pro the white races."

"This is a politician who, early on, considered

standing for the National Front, who loved the musical Cabaret for the wrong reasons, who quoted Mein Kampf with approval and whose wife's rottweilers were named after Hitler's mistress, Hitler's pilot and [pro-Nazi filmmaker] Leni Riefenstahl."

Ms Currie also claims in the article that Mr Clark kept a signed photograph of Hitler in a safe in Saltwood Castle which he would consult "in moments of stress".

In Mr Trewin's biography of Mr Clark, writer John le Carre, who knew Mr Clark well in the 1960s, is quoted as saying the late minister was "very, very close to fascism".

"That's where Alan was... He fascinated people because he actually had a potential for evil which was very unusual... He wasn't just a rake. I think he had a capacity for violence."

Chief helping force take abuse to task

HEALTH boss Paul Sutton has joined a national task force established to support women and children who are victims of violence.

The group has been set up to help the NHS provide improved health care for victims and is the interim response to an independent task-force report called Responding To Violence Against Women And Children - The Role Of The NHS.

The report makes recommendations about improving early identification of victims; enhancing the quality of and access to services; raising awareness of violence against women and children; training and development; and partnership working.

Violence

Mr Sutton, chief executive of the South East Coast Ambulance Service (SECAmb), said: "The consequences of violence and abuse against women and children cannot be overstated."

"For many victims, their first contact with the NHS will be through the ambulance service."

"We recognise the service needs support and training in dealing with victims of violence and abuse as well as referring them on to other services."

Funding has been made available to meet the report's recommendations.

SECAmb received financial support to enable ambulance staff to respond effectively to cases of violence or abuse in recognition of the unique position staff are in when responding to such patients.

The aim is to give staff the skills and training needed to recognise the signs and talk sensitively to patients about violence and abuse.

QUESTION & ANSWER

CLIVE LAWRENCE

Q Tell us a little about yourself

A I achieved my dream by working for the BBC as a journalist for more than 20 years and have gone on to run my own business from Gillingham, where we have lived since I came to work at BBC Radio Kent.

As a Devonian, I love cider and clotted cream. Our three girls have left home and are pursuing their careers, so it's great when they come home for family Sunday lunch.

I am a member of Rotary and get huge satisfaction from taking part in a range of hands-on projects to help people in my community as well as those overseas.

Q Tell us a bit about the Federation of Small Businesses

A It's Britain's leading business organisation; represents more than 200,000 self-employed and small-business owners; and is run by the members for the members. There are 6,581 Kent members.

Q What's the best bit about your job?

A As a professional communicator, there is nothing more satisfying than convincing others that what you are saying is right. However, just telling the truth, as you see it, is not good enough – you have to look for ways to persuade others through real examples which your audience can appreciate.

Q And the most challenging?

A Finding a way around all those people who have their minds made up and are resistant to change.

Q What do members get?

A As a right of membership, FSB members have access to a wide range of services, including:

- Legal advice from qualified lawyers 24/7 all year.
- Tax advice from Inland Revenue-trained specialists.
- Tax protection against in-depth tax investigations for all FSB members' businesses.
- Information on employment law, health and safety, tax and commercial law through the FSB members-only website.
- Legal documents downloadable in MS Word which can be styled to your business, available through the same website.
- Insurance cover for legal defence and an employment-disputes service with payment of statutory awards.

Q How do you qualify to join the FSB?

A You have to be self-employed or run a small business of fewer than 250 people. In reality, 99 per cent of members employ 20 or fewer and 95 per cent employ up to 10 people.

Q Do you see things picking up after the recession?

A The FSB Kent Business Barometer is run every six months, with the next due in two months' time.

Last November the economic climate appeared to have bottomed out and the decline of the previous three years had halted. The fact is that small businesses form the bedrock of the whole economy of the country. Just imagine if each business-owner created just one job each. Overnight, Britain's unemployment figures would disappear!

Q What advice would you give to someone thinking of starting a business?

A Do your research and talk to as many people in business as you can to collect their tips. But remember only to talk to people who have succeeded – why get advice from people who have a poor track record?

Q Anything you would like to add?

A Always make time for yourself and the family. In the end, they are the first priority!

Top team picks up clean momentum

VOLUNTEERS have spent a day clearing rubbish from around Sugarloaf Hill and the neighbouring field under the A20 flyover at Folkestone.

Eight people came forward to help the White Cliffs Countryside Project and picked up enough glass and cans to fill eight carrier-bags, which were then taken to recycling bins. In total, a trailer-load of filth was collected.

The WCCP said it was also disappointing to find several full sandbags under the flyover.

Being so heavy, it is thought these could only have been thrown over from roadworks on the A20 above, possibly by workers after the job was finished.

The hills behind Folkestone, of which Sugarloaf Hill is one, form a section of the North Downs Area Of Outstanding Natural Beauty and comprise one of Europe's most important and legally-protected wildlife sites.

This is because the open grazed chalk grasslands are home to a healthy range of rare plants and butterflies; they are also enjoyed by many walkers.

Much of the rubbish is produced by thoughtless car-drivers and passengers who throw rubbish out of their windows while travelling, said the WCCP.

A free leaflet with details of events and walks around Folkestone and Dover is available by phoning 01304 241806.

The heroes of Dunkirk to be remembered

A DAY of celebrations and memorials will mark the start of the 70th anniversary of the Dunkirk evacuations of the Second World War.

The Dynamo Day event, named after Operation Dynamo, will be held in Ramsgate on Wednesday, May 26.

The royal-harbour town was one of many on the south coast to see flotillas of little ships leave to rescue troops from the beaches of northern France.

Some 50 little ships and a Royal Navy frigate are expected to sail into town for the commemorations and a large programme of events is planned to pay tribute to the efforts of all involved in what many historians have referred to as a miracle.

More than 330,000 members of the allied forces were evacuated from the beaches during a nine-day period from May 27 to June 4, 1940.

Alexander Thomson, one of the event's organisers, said: "This will be a large event to mark this moment in history. I'm sure there will be no shortage of people who want to attend and we hope it may become an annual event. This is a major event which, while commemorating the heroism of the past, will allow us to show that the Dunkirk spirit never really died.

"Ramsgate, like many parts of Britain, still has a strong a community spirit and civic pride and we are talking to people from across the area looking to attend or contribute in some way. "This will be an international event that commemorates and pays tribute to the enormous contribution that civilians made to Operation Dynamo, the evacuation of the Dunkirk beaches in 1940.

"With the military commemorations of the Dunkirk evacuation taking place in France, this is an exclusive opportunity for the United Kingdom to highlight the remarkable role that the people of Ramsgate and the rest of the South East played both on land and at sea.

"Ramsgate was the marshalling point for the legendary little ships that played such an essential and heroic role in the evacuation. It was also one of the main reception centres for the returning allied troops and the many casualties that this included."

ALL ABOARD! The evacuation rescue at Dunkirk in 1940

A core programme has been announced. The day will begin at midday with a service with veterans' standards for the little ships at the Sailors' Church by Ramsgate harbour.

At 1pm there will be a lunch for the skippers of the little ships at the Oak Hotel, with an inspection of the ships and standards, and a Swordfish flypast of the harbour, at 2.30pm.

At 4.45pm the Ramsgate Sea Cadets will assemble opposite Custom House and at 5pm there will be a reception with the Mayor of Ramsgate at 5pm.

Later that evening, at 7pm, a 1940s-style theme night for boat crews, veterans and others will be held at the Belgian Bar and Café, while a dinner at the Royal Temple Yacht Club for the little ships' skippers will take place at the same time.

The day will climax with a fireworks display over the harbour at 10pm.

The following day, on Thursday, May 27, the little ships depart for France from the harbour at 6am, while a piper plays on the east pier.

Campaigners warn our police over kept images

BY MARIJKE COX

KENT Police could face a flood of High Court cases after being accused of breaking privacy laws by storing photographs of innocent motorists.

Campaigners from the civil rights group Liberty have vowed to support anyone who wants to take legal action against the force after a report by the National Policing Improvement Agency revealed that pictures taken using automatic number plate recognition (ANPR) technology – which are stored for up to two years – sometimes catch passengers' faces.

The Liberty threat could spell particular trouble for Kent which has so far invested £5.3 million into the system and claims to be one of the leading constabularies in the UK for using ANPR.

The technology, launched nationally in 2006, is used to detect criminal activity, ranging from motorists with no insurance to stolen cars.

In Kent it records the movements of one million cars a day using 200 hidden cameras in undisclosed locations.

A Liberty spokeswoman said police originally said the system would be used only to identify unlicensed and uninsured drivers.

"Now we see it being used for a myriad of purposes without any public debate," she added.

Motorists without tax, MOT or insurance are most at risk of being stopped on the road due to the system being linked up to the national DVLA database, but vehicles used in criminal activity have also been detected.

As well as the fixed cameras, a team of dedicated mobile ANPR officers travel around the county stopping vehicles that have been flagged up.

But drivers' groups have also criticised the BIG BROTHER: Liberty will support anyone who wants to take legal action against the force over use of images system, claiming everyone is being treated as a potential criminal.

Ian Taylor, Kent spokesman for the Association of British Drivers, said although motorists understand the reasons behind ANPR, keeping details of innocent drivers for so long is unnecessary.

"We know it helps target criminals, we have no argument with that, but why does the system need to look at everyone and then keep their details, often of their faces, for such a long time?" he said.

"Police are treating everyone as a potential criminal, being tagged and tracked wherever they go.

Concerns

"In the past, officers stopped people who had done something wrong, but now everyone is treated as though they are criminals.

"We have concerns about this information and control. How long before we are controlled on when or where we travel?"

This is not the first time Kent Police has come under fire for its use of ANPR.

Last year it emerged that officers had used the technology to monitor protesters during the infamous Climate Camp rally at Kingsnorth in 2008, and that law-abiding citizens were later pulled over for no other reason than that they had attended a demonstration.

Chief Insp Simon Black, head of ANPR at Kent Police, said it was unlikely images of innocent people would ever be viewed.

He said: "Cameras read the number plates on vehicles and do on occasions capture an image of the front seat passengers, but the primary objective of ANPR is to capture the make, model and colour of the vehicle to provide assistance in bringing offenders to justice.

"We retain the information – as required by the Data Information Commissioner in his ruling in January this year – for two years.

"The ANPR system reads about one million number plates a day, but if the vehicles are insured, taxed and have not been used in relation to a criminal offence then it is unlikely the images will ever be viewed.

"Therefore a person's privacy is not compromised."

Last week Kent Police was also criticised for handing out Speedwatch equipment to members of the public.

The force was accused of using 'Big Brother' techniques, allowing residents to monitor the speed of drivers in Canterbury, Whitstable and Herne Bay.

ROW: Union claims that children could criticise lessons

Pupils used 'secret mobiles' to grade teachers' lessons

A SCHOOL gave pupils mobile telephones so they could send criticism of their teachers to more senior members of staff, claims a concerned union member.

Speaking at the annual Association of Teachers and Lecturers conference, teacher John Rivers revealed that children as young as 11 had used the technology to give instant ratings on their teachers' abilities to senior staff, and even during lessons.

He said that about 20 youngsters at the un-named secondary school in Kent were given the phones during what was called a "quality assurance" week.

Mr Rivers, who teaches information and communication technology (ICT) at a different school in the county, said he was contacted for advice by colleagues at the school in question.

He said: "I have no problem generally in asking pupils how they felt about my lesson. It's just I believe there should be clear guidance about how those observations should be conducted and reported."

Mr Rivers said the scheme was part of a drive spearheaded by the Government to make teaching staff more accountable for their style of running a classroom.

The conference was told of similar examples of schoolchildren apparently getting too much power when it comes to the content of lessons, behaviour policies and even the hiring and firing of staff. One example of excessive pupil power was when they interviewed a man and two women teachers for a job, and then picked the one they thought was the most attractive.

Plus a teacher seeking promotion was rejected for not singing the Michael Jackson hit Bad during an interview.

Speaking to reporters after the conference had finished, Mr Rivers said teachers at the Kent school were concerned they had not been forewarned or consulted on the scheme.

He said: "I understand it just happened. Staff were not aware of how it worked and there was a lack of transparency. I suppose staff must feel it's a bit threatening if it's not transparent."

A spokesman for the Department for Children, Schools and Families said it believed pupils should play an active role in their own learning and in the development of their schools. However, both KCC and Medway Council said it was unaware of mobile phones being used in any of its schools to critique teaching staff.

Kent university scientist involved in vital breakthrough with battle against cancer

SLOWLY but surely scientists are edging towards a cure for cancer – and now a Kent medical research team has revealed a new breakthrough in the long battle.

Dr Mark Howard's research at the University of Kent's School of Biosciences has led to the development of a new technique that will deliver cancer treatments direct to certain tumours, and he has now patented the discovery.

It is primarily aimed at targeting pancreatic cancer – which is currently very difficult to treat – and involves cancer-targeting peptides binding to a complex protein found in high levels on many tumour cells, but absent in most normal tissues.

By seeking out this protein and binding to it the peptides can deliver cancer treatments directly to the site with increased precision and reduced side effects.

And the treatment is so effective it is not going to be years before it's used.

In fact, the American company Aura Biosciences Inc has already licensed the technique from Cancer Research Technology.

Dr Howard's role in this development involved identifying the shape of the peptides.

He said: "These peptides have a particular three-dimensional shape enabling them to specifically target this tumour-associated protein in a more effective way than ever observed before.

"We were able to model different peptide shapes and see a clear link between shape and effectiveness."

Dr Howard, a member of the school's Protein Science Research Group, added that the technology has potential within tumour imaging and therapy for efficient identification and eradication of cancers.

The senior lecturer joined the School of Biosciences in 2001 and his research interests include the structural and dynamic characterisation of bio-chemically relevant molecules, enhanced structural stability in proteins and peptides, as well as advancing nuclear magnetic resonance spectroscopy.

Collateral damage when treating cancer cells has long been a major problem.

But Dr Phil L'Huillier, director of business management at CRT, said: "These peptides have the potential to seek out and destroy cancer cells, leaving the surrounding areas unharmed.

"We believe this technology could have particular strengths in delivering treatments for cancers that have limited treatment options, such as pancreatic and head and neck cancer.

"Crucially this targeted treatment could also reduce the side effects that are commonly associated with standard therapies.

"We look forward to the results of this programme with great interest."

Homework giving parents headache

PARENTS asked to help with school homework are feeling the pressure as they struggle to support their child's learning, a new report has revealed.

Almost 80 per cent in the South East admitted to not understanding the curriculum, with 50 per cent of youngsters confessing to feeling confused when their parents try to help.

The report 'I'm stuck – can you help me?' – commissioned by the Government agency Becta aims to provide parents in Kent with information to show them how to support their children.

Schools are also being encouraged to set up websites and learning platforms to equip confused parents with the resources they need to help with homework.

Neil McLean, executive director of Becta, said using technology in this way is extremely beneficial to a child's learning.

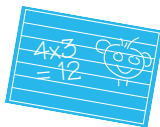

"Schools benefit from from parents' involvement and if children feel they are getting the right support from the schools and families, this has a positive effect on their grades," he said.

The report revealed 81 per cent of parents in the region are asked for help with homework by their children at least once a week. And one in ten parents confessed they felt unable to support their child, which was having a profound emotional effect.

Becta is pushing for schools to get involved in its Next Generation Learning programme, which urges education officials to use technology to link parents with their child's curriculum.

There are already a number of schools in Kent leading the way using ICT to improve links between work at school and at home.

For more information go to www.nextgenerationlearning.org.uk.

Dancing in streets for drama project

STUDENTS at Folkestone Academy have completed a drama project by dancing in the town's high street, thanks to funding from the Kent 20in12 Learning Programme.

The finale consisted of two performances in Folkestone town centre in the style of the Natural Theatre Company, world-famous for its indoor and outdoor comic-visual theatre.

University Centre Folkestone drama lecturer and Natural Theatre Company performer Gary Barber said: "The pupils were enthusiastic and committed in rehearsals and this stood them in good stead for the performance."

"They were really professional young actors."

University Centre Folkestone, above, in Mill Bay entails a partnership between the University of Greenwich and Canterbury Christ Church University. It offers degree programmes in performing and visual arts, dance education, creative writing and early-years education.

Academy achieves status as healthy place to learn

■ BY JAMES ALEXANDRE

MARSH Academy students can look forward to leading healthier and more active lifestyles, thanks to their school being awarded a specialist status.

The Extended Services And Healthy Schools celebration event was held at Ashford's International Hotel and the academy was recognised for its efforts with a Healthy Schools award.

To achieve the status, it had to show it had met national criteria across four themes, such as PSHEE (personal, social, health and economic education), healthy eating, physical activity and emotional health and well-being.

The New Romney school achieved this by holding a healthy-eating project supported by Sainsbury's and delivering sports activities in the Marsh Academy Leisure Centre during the holidays.

For the PSHEE, the academy invited local health-workers to give relationship and contraceptive advice for girls and boys.

Students can also now choose from an array of sports as part of their physical education, including skiing, rowing, fishing and salsa.

Health and social care course-leader Janet Thomas and BTEC students Kayleigh Hudson and Kirri Green were at the event to collect the academy's certificate and plaque.

The Marsh Academy specialises in business and enterprise and is sponsored by Microsoft, Kent County Council and the Tonbridge School.

HEALTHY CHANGE: Janet Thomas picks up the certificate, along with students Kayleigh Hudson and Kirri Green

The school aims to provide young people with the skills, knowledge and understanding that will equip them as young adults, together with opportunities to develop their confidence and entrepreneurship.

The National Healthy Schools Programme aims to raise standards in health, pupil achievement and social inclusion by improving physical and emotional health throughout the school day and after lessons.

The programme is a joint initiative between the Department For Children, Schools And Families (DCSF) and the Department Of Health to promote a whole-school and whole-child approach to health.

It was started in 1999 and the Government has set a target for all schools to be working towards this status. By December last year 75 per cent of schools were already granted specialist status, which translates to almost four million young people enjoying the benefits of a healthy school.

Do we really want an out-of-town MP?

I am very troubled, as many other members of the electorate in the Dover and Deal constituency must be, over several matters, but one in particular springs to mind.

Present MP Gwyn Prosser has lived and worked in the constituency for many years, and it seems he intends to remain here.

He has fought many battles on behalf of all in the area and is always available in the constituency, as a dedicated MP should be.

On the other hand, his opposing Tory candidate, Charles Elphicke, owns a residence in Belgravia, London, which is sensible for an international tax lawyer, but of course he is rightly registered on Deal's electoral roll.

Now the question is: will Charles Elphicke be a full-time MP for the constituency?

Obviously his job must make huge demands on his time, which he deals with very capably, I'm sure.

An area as important as Dover and Deal needs and deserves a full-time MP – let's hope it gets one.

It's a blighted road to Wolverhampton

Readers will no doubt remember that local councils across the country were given extra funds in the Budget to tackle the damage caused by this winter's dreadful weather. Kent County Council's share is £2,448,400.

That's an average of £204,000 for each district in the county.

Together with the £80,000 per district council area that Conservative-run Kent County Council has announced, this means we could make some progress in tackling the pothole menace in Deal and Dover.

While the county council has made it clear it intends to spend the £80,000 on slapping a bit of tarmac into any potholes it happens to stumble across, the Government has made it equally clear it wants a proper job done.

As the letter from the Department for Transport to the chief executive of KCC says, "there is evidence that where roads have been properly maintained, winter weather has much less opportunity to do damage".

Of course, it will be up to our current crop of county councillors to ensure the residents of Dover district get a decent share of the money available.

It is important that our share doesn't go 'up west' while our Conservative county councillor is electioneering at a McDonald's on the way 'home' from Wolverhampton's Bentley Bridge cinema.

Why the General Election should be the most exciting thing you'll do all year

ONLY three weeks and you can forget all this General Election nonsense, eh?

Only three weeks and we can sit back and let our democratically-elected MPs run the country for another five years. Only another three weeks and your voice will no longer be heard...

In France 250 years ago, philosopher Jean-Jacques Rousseau wrote: "The English people believes itself to be free; it is gravely mistaken; it is free only during election of members of parliament; as soon as the members are elected, the people is enslaved."

OK, JJ could go a little over the top and yes it might have lost something in translation... but perhaps he has a point. Love 'em or loathe 'em, New Labour, who swept to victory in 1997, have changed this country.

On the plus side, we have shorter waiting times for hospital operations; full-time workers are guaranteed 24 days' paid holiday; Scots and Welsh have their own assemblies; there are 85,000 more nurses and 32,000 more doctors (and who knows how many more in pen-pushing admin staff). You get the idea, the former Blair wannabe MPs have done some good things.

On the flip side, Mr B Liar did take us into a war for reasons that we probably weren't too clear about. And there has been an explosion in made-up jobs in the public sector, like nappy advisers for new mums (£25,000 a year, see Guardian jobs) and five-a-day coordinators (same salary, same jobs section) to tell us what to eat to stay healthy.

Just another day with Southeastern

Southeastern train passengers were subjected to three hours-plus stuck in a landslide between Maidstone East and Bearsted on Friday, February 26.

I arrived at Maidstone East to catch the 17.57 to Ashford after a seminar at police HQ. The train was a few minutes late.

I was told there was a slight delay as there may be a "small" landslide near Bearsted. There were about 60 passengers in the rear four coaches and 20-plus in the front two.

18.05: We're under way, trundling down the line until we grind to a halt. We've hit something – it's too dark to see properly.

18.25: Told an engineer has been sent for to assess whether we can get going. He's just left Paddock Wood. Half-an-hour's wait.

19.00: He's arrived and has a big torch. He's "assessing the situation".

19.15: Upline train passes. People are trying to keep families etc updated on their mobiles.

19.30ish: They need to cut away a bit of chicken-wire. The previous train has lurched to a halt at Lenham, having ripped up the fence. There's a pregnant woman in the front two coaches, needing water. There's none available.

19.45: They're sending another train from Ashford to detrain us across to it – probably back to Maidstone East.

19.55: Guard, who's doing her best, regains mobile signal but says they are looking for the passenger ramp to get people across.

20.05: We're trying to be upbeat, but the mood in the rear three carriages is apparently rather 'ugly'. We're all getting rather hungry and thirsty, too.

20.10: Some more workmen are coming to dig us out.

20.15: Upline train passes. Anyone know how to contact International Rescue?

20.20: Power's off altogether – we're in the dark and it's getting cold in here anyway.

20.30ish: Let there be light – three diggers have arrived. Err, with an arc light, a few torches, some large wire-cutters and a couple of spades.

20.50: We're watching them dig, cut and do a bit of chainsawing (but only a bit). They're looking up at the landslide – will more come down? Mud looks pretty sodden...

21.00: More digging.

21.20: Power on again. We lurch, then stop, then move again. Crawl into Bearsted. Passengers from London etc detrain. What about the rest of us?

21.25: Everybody off – on to waiting coaches. No sign, of course, of any refreshments; then clambering over the bridge. Pile on to coaches. First one goes full, I'm on the second one. Train departs. Coach-driver says the train's been sent empty to Ashford, so the line must have been cleared earlier.

We're in a bit of debt, too, and while the financial collapse was worldwide, we in Britain are worse off because Labour gave bankers far too much freedom and we will be paying for that cock-up for 40 years.

Immigration is a massive issue for this once-tolerant nation. In Labour's diversity-aware Britain we have an organisation for every group, be it ethnic, transgendered, gay, single parent etc etc.

However, while there is a black chief police officers' association, the same thing couldn't exist for Caucasian cops.

But as the flood of refugees, n'er-do-wells, criminals and economic migrants have invaded Britain over the past decade, few dare discuss it for fear of being branded a BNP supporter or racist.

That surely is the legacy of Blair's Britain. We are watched by more CCTV cameras than any other nation, and the vital need for a voice to be given to all minorities has resulted in the majority thinking that it's best to stay quiet.

If you own a guest house and suggest you are not happy letting a gay couple stay there, you'll get a visit from your not-so-friendly neighbourhood cop.

A petshop-owner who sold a goldfish to a boy aged 14 ends up tagged, fined and with a criminal record.

That's Britain under Labour.

Jean-Jacques probably had it right. So enjoy the next three weeks – it is our big chance to get the government we deserve. But will we take it?

22.00: Arrive Ashford International. No staff to meet us. We are left to fend for ourselves as they hide in their cubby-holes.

23.00: Arrive home, five hours after leaving Maidstone East, cold, tired, hungry, thirsty and 'rather angry'.

Why was this train let through in the first place? Why was Southeastern relying on the driver alone, with a lot of passengers onboard, to assess the situation?

Why did an engineer, and later team, have to come from Paddock Wood to assess the situation?

Questions, questions, questions... and the obvious answer to all of the above?

Oh, it'll cost us money, it's not efficient or cost-effective and so on... so you lot will have to make do with feeble excuses, unmeant apologies, loads of PR and spin, being cold, tired and hungry while we laugh all the way to the bank.

Draining lack of help from County Hall

During the thunderstorm on the evening of Monday, March 29, I was in the Mill Hill area of Deal.

The torrent of water running down the slope was appalling and just goes to show how pathetic our drainage system is when it comes to dealing with rain that is heavy but far from unusual in Britain.

One of the manhole covers on Mill Hill was lifting because of the quantity of water it had to take. This is clearly a danger to road-users.

Just as clearly, there is a problem with the drains in our town.

Deryck Murray has repeatedly drawn it to everyone's attention, but the Tory administration on Kent County Council has done little or nothing about the problem.

And the little they have done was thanks to Terry Birket and Mike Eddy.

Our current county councillors seem to think they are doing us a favour by allowing the roads in Mill Hill and Upper Walmer to act as waterfalls in wet weather, and for the roads in Lower Walmer and Middle and North Deal to act as settling tanks for the run-off.

Unfortunately, they are wrong.

Clir Bryan Henderson (Labour)
Deal Town Council (North Deal ward)

How the Tories are wrecking rural Kent

Conservative MPs Greg Clark and Sir John Stanley have criticised the Green Party for wanting to protect Kent's environment from the widening of the A21.

This is not an isolated case of Conservatives defending attacks on the environment.

This is happening in every district in Kent:

- Ashford: promotion of a lorry park on a greenfield site at Aldington.
- Canterbury: city council has refused to sign up to the 10/10 campaign to reduce greenhouse gas emissions.
- Dartford: council supports another road crossing of the Thames, with serious implications for traffic in Dartford and Gravesham.
- Dover: council supports port expansion and massive housing expansion, which will add to serious air pollution in the Dover area.
- Gravesham: see Dartford.
- Maidstone: council supports housing expansion of the town on to greenfield sites, well above local demand for housing.
- Medway: council proposed to wreck an area of woodland at the Paddock for a new bus station but has been forced to modify proposals after strong public objections.
- Shepway: council is seeking a Dungeness C nuclear power station, despite the extreme long-term costs of nuclear waste, high labour costs and long lead-times for new-build.
- Swale: council supports extension of Kent Science Park on to greenfield land.
- Thanet: council supports further expansion of Manston airport and the huge China Gateway warehousing project.
- Tunbridge Wells: council favours park-and-ride, despite evidence from Canterbury that such schemes create new areas of traffic congestion and air pollution.

School standards 'will be hit' by cuts

A CHILDREN'S services union has warned of a potential drop in achievement in Kent schools if "deep funding cuts" are not properly considered.

It follows an announcement in February by Kent County Council that some 260 jobs could be slashed from its department for children, families and education in a bid to save £8million.

At the time councillor Sarah Hohler – cabinet member for the department – insisted front-line services would not be affected, but professional schools-improvement staff now believe performance levels will be hit.

Redeployment

Children's services union Aspect said the restructuring would mean cuts in services offering professional support to schools.

Restructuring within the department would see seven per cent of jobs lost. In secondary schools improvement teams, however, there could be a 50 per cent reduction in staffing, with no current indication of redeployment in other areas, according to Aspect.

Union officials and school workers argued the plans were developed with little or no consultation with key stakeholders.

But Rosalind Turner, managing director for children, families and education at KCC, said: "We are not yet halfway through the consultation and we are interested in any additional proposals to deliver the required efficiencies."

She added that despite the possible changes, a high degree of support for schools would be maintained.

"Our strategy is to reduce management and administration as much as possible, and to protect direct services to children, young people and families," she said.

Drugs, weapons and cigs all stopped at the border

■ BY STEVE KNIGHT

BORDER control officers based across Kent helped seize more than £237 million worth of illegal drugs in just one year.

They also helped prevent 27,000 dangerous weapons from reaching the streets as well as 557 million smuggled cigarettes representing a loss in tax revenue of £109 million.

Launched on April 1, 2009, the UK Border Agency was formed when customs and immigration officers joined forces as one single organisation. It is based in Dover and is also represented at the French ports of Calais, Coquelles, Dunkirk and Boulogne.

Regional director Tony Smith said: "The public expects us to keep the UK border safe and secure at all times because drugs, illegal immigration and contraband damage communities and businesses. That's why we have a strong new force at the border with combined customs and immigration powers, which works 24 hours a day to stop illegal immigrants and smugglers."

During the past year more than a million freight vehicles have been searched at British border controls in northern France and Belgium, with 29,000 illegal attempts to cross the Channel thwarted.

Notable successes include the seizure of £3.7m of drugs from just one lorry – which was

STOPPED: Tobacco and an avocado stuffed with cocaine were seized by UK Border Agency officials at Dover loaded with oil drums packed with heroin, amphetamine, ecstasy and cannabis – as well as the discovery of 5kg of cocaine hidden in a car bumper and 1.2 tonnes of hand-rolling tobacco concealed in a cargo of boilers.

The agency also carries out intelligence-led operations to catch illegal workers and other immigration offenders.

Where companies are found using illegal workers they face a fine of up to £10,000 per employee. Examples include the arrest of six onion farmers from Iraq and Palestine who were caught working at a farm in north Kent, and a £30,000 fine for the Hands On Car Wash firm in Ashford, Tenterden and Folkestone that was found to be employing illegal immigrants.

Large companies have also been caught out as well, such as the Whitstable branch of Domino's Pizza that was fined £10,000 for giving work to an illegal Indian and Kosovan.

Mr Smith added: "We are dedicated to stopping drugs getting onto our streets, removing illegal migrants and locking up or deporting the most serious criminals."

"We will continue to crack down on foreign nationals who don't play by the rules, and the people and organisations behind them."

Re-creating the Motown magic

THE MAGIC OF MOTOWN

Saturday, April 17,

Leas Cliff Hall, Folkestone.

EXPERIENCE the songs that changed the music world with The Magic of Motown.

When the music of stars like the Jackson Five, Stevie Wonder and Marvin Gaye began to emerge from Detroit in the early 60s, people all over the world discovered an exciting sound that would have fans dancing in the street.

Now, a Kent audience can step back in time and relive the thrill of that enchanting time.

This toe-tapping show features unforgettable songs from some all-time classic artists, including Diana Ross and the Supremes, the Four Tops, the Temptations, Martha Reeves, Smokey Robinson, Mary Wells and the Isley Brothers.

Many of the songs made famous by the world's most iconic record label will be featured, from Signed, Sealed, Delivered and Stop in the Name of Love, to Why Do Fools Fall in Love. Recapture precious memories or hear these great tunes played live for the very first time during this upbeat celebration.

My Girl became My Guy when Magic of Motown singer Natasha Burnett stepped into some very big shoes. The talented performer plays Diana Ross, but last year she found herself taking on an unexpected additional role – Michael Jackson.

"The first time I performed as Michael was on the night we learned he had passed away," Burnett said.

"We hastily rehearsed a version of Michael's hit Ben as an extra special tribute and it was decided I could hit the high notes better than any other member of the cast."

Since then, Burnett has been playing the young Jackson as a member of the Jackson 5, belting out their timeless hits like ABC, I'll Be There and I Want You Back. Her performances have been so authentic that many audiences have not spotted that this young man is actually a highly-gifted young woman.

"Our production's Michael Jackson has had an unfair advantage when it comes to hitting the young Michael's famed high notes," said show producer, Michael Taylor.

"We didn't feel the necessity to spoil the illusion and there hasn't been a murmur about it on the grapevine. In fact, Natasha's additional role would have remained our little secret, had a radio station not asked for an interview!"

Burnett has been performing on stage from the age of 15, and has also appeared on the big screen, including a role in the film Children of Man with Clive Owen and Michael Caine.

The 23-year-old has been playing Diana Ross with consummate skill, as well as Martha Reeves, Gladys Knight and Mary Wells.

"It's a job any girl would die for," she said. "With 16 costume changes, I get to wear the most amazing frocks every night and get paid for the privilege. Fortunately, I restrict my portrayal of Diana Ross to my onstage performance, so the guys need not be concerned that I have any diva tendencies."

With a cast of highly-talented singers and musicians, The Magic of Motown claims to offer a different experience every time.

"Our Michael Jackson tribute is a glowing example of how our show can respond and adapt to suit any audience and any situation," Taylor said.

"Other productions can't present anything other than what's rehearsed. Our stars delight in interacting with the audience and adapting to please. No two shows are ever the same."

The show starts at 7.30pm and tickets cost £19.50/£17.50. To book call the box office on 0844 847 1776 or go online at www.leascliffhall.org.uk.

GRANDPARENTS EVENT

Saturday, April 17 and Sunday, April 18, Kent & East Sussex Railway, Tenterden

GRANDPARENTS can enjoy a free day out with their family at a special event this weekend.

The railway will be giving passengers the chance to experience the joy of steam for less with the Grandparents Event. For every child rover ticket priced at £7.80, one grandparent can travel free.

Families can enjoy the wonderful scenery of the Wealden countryside and Rother Valley, along with the attractions on offer at the various stations.

The ticket price includes a return ride from Tenterden on a steam or diesel train, taking passengers along the 10.5-mile journey to Bodiam Station. There are five stations on the line, but passengers are encouraged to board at the main stations – Tenterden, Northiam or Bodiam.

With unlimited day travel, visitors can get on and off the train to find out what is on offer at each destination. Whether you would like to visit the shops in Tenterden or discover the history-steeped atmosphere of Bodiam Castle, there is plenty for everyone to do.

For more information call 01580 765155 or visit the website at www.kesr.org.uk.

THE SOLID SILVER 60S SHOW

Thursday, April 15, Leas Cliff Hall, Folkestone

CELEBRATE the best of British music when The Solid Silver 60s Show brings a stellar line-up to Kent.

For its 25th anniversary tour, the production has assembled a fantastic bill of iconic bands including special guests The Troggs. Kent-based group Vanity Fare, pictured will also perform in this evening of nostalgic musical entertainment.

With their hit songs such as Wild Thing and Love Is All Around, The Troggs – whose line-up includes two founder members, front man Reg Presley and lead guitarist Chris Britton – continue to delight audiences.

During the 60s, the Swinging Blue Jeans were one of the most famous bands of the Merseybeat era. Dave Berry scored hits with Mama and much-covered The Crying Game, while Mike Pender was the original voice of The Searchers.

Brian Poole achieved a number of top five hits with The Tremeloes and Peter Sarstedt topped the charts with his Ivor Novello Award-winner, Where Do You Go To (My Lovely).

The show starts at 7.30pm and tickets cost £26.50/£24.50. Book at www.leascliffhall.org.uk or call the box office on 0844 8471776.

DAD RULES – ANDREW CLOVER

Saturday, April 17
Gulbenkian Theatre, Canterbury

THE magic and madness of fatherhood is explored in hilarious style by comedian Andrew Clover.

Based on his popular Sunday Times column, Dad Rules sees Clover blend stand-up comedy with anecdotes from his experiences as a parent. Once terrified of children, Clover morphed into a contented dad with three wonderful young daughters, but still has a lot to learn.

With five acclaimed Edinburgh Festival shows under his belt and a nomination for the former Perrier Award, Clover has shown his comic credentials. From his early morning struggles to generation gaps and his desire to avoid turning into his own father, Clover's observations are funny, captivating and heart-warming.

Dad Rules also inspired a bestselling book, which is now available in paperback. As well as being a successful comedian and writer, Clover is also an actor who has appeared in My Almost Famous Family and Ashes to Ashes.

The show, which is suitable for over-14s, starts at 7.45pm and tickets cost £12/£10. Book online at www.gulbenkiantheatre.co.uk or call the box office on 01227 769075.

WAY UP STREAM

Wednesday, April 21, to Saturday, April 24,
Granville Theatre, Ramsgate

A BOATING holiday takes a sinister turn in Alan Ayckbourn's popular play, Way Up Stream.

Broadstairs Dickens Players present their production of the story, which will be adjudicated for the Kent Drama Festival on the Thursday.

When business partners Keith and Alistair take their wives away on a boating holiday, they should be looking forward to a restful time. But once aboard the cabin cruiser, it becomes apparent that both marriages are under strain and impending union problems add business woes to the mix.

After receiving updates about the crisis, Keith decides to leave the boat to tackle the problem while Alistair continues with his holiday. When he grounds the boat, a stranger, Vince, comes to their rescue and takes control of the vessel, much to the joy of Keith's wife, June. When Vince's girlfriend also joins the party, things take a very strange turn indeed.

Performances start at 7.30pm and tickets cost £9/£8. To book call the box office on 01843 591750. For more information visit the website at www.granvilletheatre.com.

CONCERT FOR SARA

Saturday, April 17, Theatre Royal Margate

THE life of a beautiful young woman is celebrated with a concert in memory of Sara Bakri.

Held in aid of the Children's Liver Disease Foundation and Rethink, the show will pay tribute to Sara (pictured), a gifted dancer who died last year at the age of just 21, and the event will feature performances by many of her friends.

She danced at the Page-Mason School in Broadstairs and Hasland in Herne Bay, both of which will take part in the show, as well as the Year 11 B'Tech Dance Group at the Charles Dickens School which benefited from Sara's help.

The bill also features dancers Rebekka Bowling, Michael Gunn, Kallum Hopper and Louise Dempster, along with Keiron Stone's band, Morning Departure.

Other performers include flautist Lydia Pearson and pianist Neal Osgood, several members of musical family, the Martins, comedy sketch duo The Spring Chix, comedians Greg Holmes and Alan Mitchell and singer Lexi Lea. Sara's brother Nadim and Louise Dempster will be MCs.

The show starts at 7.30pm and tickets cost £8/£6. To book call 0845 130 1786 or 01227 787787 or visit www.theatreroyal-margate.com.

WIN a DVD of comedy football movie The Shouting Men

THE Shouting Men brings the magic of the FA Cup to the small screen with the uproarious misadventures of a group of misfit Gillingham FC supporters during a cross-country "away day" weekend to watch their beloved team play in the quarter finals of the FA Cup against Newcastle United.

The Shouting Men stars Matt Daniel-Baker and Warren Llabias, Dudley Sutton and Craig Fairbrass, with cameo appearances come from John Barnes and Peter Beardsley.

The Gillingham fans are brought together by football in the way that only football can do and the movie perfectly captures the hilarious banter of footie fans. If you're fed up with football films always being about football violence this is one for you. Full of genuine laugh-out-loud moments, the film is a welcome and very funny look at the lighter side of the beautiful game – a real comedy for real football fans.

The Shouting Men (cert. 15) is out on DVD this week but you can win a copy of the DVD in our great competition.

To enter, simply answer the question below and send your entry on a postcard along with your email address (if applicable), name, address, and daytime telephone number to The Shouting Men Competition, KOS Media, Apple Barn, Smeeth, Ashford, Kent TN25 6SR. The closing date is April 30, 2010.

Question: Fans of which football team describe themselves as The Shouting Men?

No purchase necessary. For our full Terms and Conditions please visit www.kent-news.co.uk, or for a posted copy of the T&Cs call 01303 817073.

Green sportster shows promise ahead of rivals

IT could be that despite the green credentials of petrol-electric hybrids, their best deployment might be the sporting sector.

The instant pulling power of the electric motors can give the performance edge needed for the adrenalin rush would-be buyers crave.

Honda is first to the market with a green sportster, the CR-Z, due in June and priced from a not unreasonable £17,000. It also promises to be an exciting drive, particularly as the first hybrid on sale in the UK with a manual gearbox.

KITT beats the 'Gene Genie' to TV favourite

TWO TV motoring icons and their TV series are back onscreen – Gene Hunt's Audi Quattro (Ashes to Ashes) and KITT (Knight Rider).

Both also appear in a Kwik-Fit poll to find the public's top 10 TV cars.

KITT was top, followed by: 2) Insp Morse's Jaguar MkII, 3) Ferrari Testarossa from Miami Vice, 4) Magnum PI's Ferrari 308, 5) Batmobile, 6) Gene Hunt's Quattro (pictured), 7) Lady Penelope's Rolls, 8) Dukes of Hazzard's General Lee, 9) The Saint's Volvo and 10) A-Team's GMC van.

Jaguar just purrs along during economic gloom

JAGUAR is making light of the sluggish UK economy – it doubled sales of its sleek XF executive car in March against March 2009.

Sales of all Jaguars are also more than one per cent up for the month, not bad when it was effectively a two-model brand – the junior X-Type model was axed in late 2009, and the all-new XJ is not on sale until May. The surge has been helped by the improved diesel power of the XF (£29,900) complementing the car's sports saloon lines.

MUCH BETTER BY DESIGN: Citroën improved their C3 supermini this year by giving it a classier look and a larger car feel plus an eye-catching Zenith panoramic front screen

Citroën C3 targeting a more discerning small car market

CITROËN launched a vastly improved C3 supermini model earlier this year.

Despite a cuddly, egg-shaped design evoking the brand's classic 2CV, I thought the previous car pretty average.

However, friendly imagery and occasionally bonkers discounting helped blind motoring Francophiles to the car's cramped cabin, sloppy driving characteristics and poor build.

But Citroën must have seen that would-be downsizers and generally more discerning consumers would not be so short-sighted this time.

So the new car (from £10,790) looks and feels much classier and able to deliver a larger car feel for those who really are trading a family hatchback or something bigger in favour of this little five-door supermini.

We tested the car via Wilmoths Citroën at Maidstone where general sales manager Kelvin Clayton was quick to defend the old car yet promote its successor:

"You've got to remember that the original C3 came out seven years ago and things have moved fast in the industry and at Citroën, but it has been a good seller for us and will continue to offer value as a used buy. The new car takes us to a new level and we expect to do well with it."

ue to offer value as a used buy. The new car takes us to a new level and we expect to do well with it."

The test car was an upmarket 1.4 Exclusive with a lively 95bhp VTi 16v petrol engine (£14,090), with interior chroming, leather trimmings and auto climate and cruise controls.

But it also had the eye-catching Zenith panoramic front screen – the new C3's trademark. This is standard on all but the VT entry model and comes with a neat pull-down interior 'roof' and sun visors.

It's a stylish luxury touch to the C3 range and defines its more upmarket stance this time.

There is little disappointment on the move either, with a better balance of ride comfort and handling than before and the 1.4 engine is well-suited to the car, though there are 1.1 and 1.6-litre petrol alternatives plus 1.4 and 1.6 diesels.

My only criticism on the test was a slightly sloppy gearshift, which may irritate keen drivers. But there is so much more to like about this smarter and swifter C3.

It should be cheap to run too, with a range of frugal low emission engines plus a miserly ultra-eco Airdream version from £14,490.

The new Superb Estate. Bigger. Better. Happier.

With a class leading 1,865 litres of boot space, colour touch screen satellite navigation, blue-tooth, and full leather upholstery as standard*, no wonder it was voted Top Gear's Luxury Car of the Year 2009. Starting from £17,715 RRP.

What Car? magazine has given the new Superb Estate an excellent write-up in its first review, calling the car "big, comfortable, plush and fine value".

The magazine was particularly impressed by the value-for-money offered by the Superb Estate, saying it's, "cracking value and undercuts the equivalent Mondeo Estate by thousands."

Preventing terrible loss getting worse

Steve Osborne, The Mortgage Man, shares his knowledge with you in this fortnightly column

AS THE size of the average mortgage increases, so too does the need to protect your partner and your family against being left with a huge debt should the worst happen.

The death of the main breadwinner is bad enough without the added problem of where to find a four-figure mortgage payment each month. There are a number of ways in which you can protect yourself and your home, and I am being asked for advice from more and more clients who want to make sure they won't have to worry about losing their home as well as a loved one.

Term assurance is probably the simplest type of protection and often the cheapest. It simply pays out if the insured person dies and can either be on a level or a decreasing basis depending on the reason for the cover.

Critical illness cover is similar way but has the added benefit of paying out if the policy holder contracts one of a specified list of critical illnesses. These vary between companies, so make sure you compare not just the cost but the cover provided.

Family income benefit is a term assurance policy, with or without critical illness cover, that differs by paying out a monthly income for a set period rather than a lump sum.

This is often cheaper than a lump sum policy and it does away with the worry of having to invest a large sum of money at a time when the surviving family has more important concerns.

Permanent health insurance pays out a monthly income if you are unable to work due to accident or sickness. This is a long-term plan designed to continue to your retirement date or until you return to work and should not be confused with the short term accident, sickness and unemployment plans that have had so much bad press.

Make sure you get good independent advice and remember that if a life assurance policy is set up incorrectly you could end up with a big inheritance tax bill rather than the money going where you intended it to.

Ombudsman's demand for lettings protection

Landlords and tenants would benefit from closure of legislative loopholes, says report

■ BY NICK AMES

THE Property Ombudsman is demanding that whichever party wins General Election urgently legislates to improve protection for both landlords and tenants who employ letting agents.

The call has been echoed by many across the property field who say action needs to be taken as soon as possible.

In his annual report, Ombudsman Christopher Hamer urges swift action because of the increasing activity in the lettings market during the downturn.

According to his report, the fact that letting agents were not covered by the provisions of the Consumers, Estate Agents and Redress Act is an "alarming inconsistency".

Mr Hamer also recommends that landlords and tenants only use agents who are members of a recognised trade association or any agent who is a member of the Property Ombudsman scheme. LetAssured UK is one company active in this area.

"LetAssured UK has been specifically set up by landlords to protect themselves and other like-minded landlords from the unscrupulous activities of some letting agents," said managing director David Plaister.

"Landlords from across the UK have been joining with us in a move away from the traditional agents who have been rubbing their hands and watching the fees roll in."

The proportion of the Ombudsman's workload related to lettings disputes rose from 28 per cent to 49 per cent of his workload last year. LetAssured UK said it guarantees landlords and tenants peace of mind in knowing that they are dealing with a firm which meets defined standards of customer service and has the necessary insurance to protect their clients' money, plus a customer complaints procedure offering independent redress.

"LetAssured underpins the entire administrative procedure of renting property on behalf of the landlord, and he is safe in the knowledge there will be no hidden costs," said Mr Plaister.

FLOOD OF COMPLAINTS: Whoever wins the election will need to address inconsistencies in lettings legislation

Springing into action can increase chance of a sale

CONNELLS offices in Kent are enjoying one of their busiest periods since the start of the year and say the upward trend looks set to continue.

Staff say more properties are coming on the market and business is looking good.

"Our branches have had a busy few weeks with more properties coming on the market as people are encouraged by lower interest rates and the start of spring.

"Demand is continuing to outstrip supply and because of the lack of stock there are more people chasing the same property, which is driving prices up in some areas," said Connells regional managing director, Kevin Peel.

"Houses continue to sell as long as vendors are realistic in their expectations and their estate agent is prepared to work hard on their behalf, using every opportunity to bring a property to the attention of as many buyers as possible."

Mr Peel said buyers could help by following a few simple tips: "First impressions count, so make sure your property has 'kerb appeal'. Paint the front door, tidy the garden and put up hanging baskets," he said.

"Make sure the home is clean, tidy and de-cluttered. Buyers are trying to picture themselves in your home, so get rid of junk and minimise personal possessions such as photos. Throw out anything that has been broken for a year or more. If you haven't mended it by now, chances are you never will."

Spring flowers in bloom make gardens particularly attractive, and spring cleaning adds to homes looking good, both inside and out, he added.

Association upset by new legislation

LANDLORDS' "worst fears" have been realised with new legislation covering houses in multiple occupation, it has been claimed by one of the bodies representing them.

The laws will see landlords required to gain planning permission if they purchase a property designed to be rented to three or more unrelated people. Alan Ward, chairman of the Residential Landlords' Association, criticised the legislation on two grounds.

"First, it is totally impractical," he said. "And second, it is social engineering, because planning law has never been about who can live where – it's about the use of the building."

Mr Ward said landlords were unlikely to wait for any administrative delays in planning permission being granted.

His comments come after PropertyEarth.net research indicated three-bedroom houses made up 57 per cent of all property searches by investors. Two-bedroom homes accounted for 21 per cent, and four-bedrooms 15 per cent.

Support Worker x 2
£16,607-£17,494

Ref: 701/E
Staplehurst, Kent

Robert is a 33 year old man with autism. He lives on his own in his own home but with the help of a dedicated team of staff to support him. He likes to keep himself active and has been known to run, swim, cycle, trampoline and roller blade in the past. Robert's friends describe him as fun loving and outgoing. We're looking to find two people to join our team & help him to keep building on a life that reflects his personality and the things he likes best.

As a team member it is important that you work well with others and contribute ideas in order to help Robert make sense of the world around him & maintain the structure he needs for day to day living. mcch will provide you with the training to equip you with the skills you will need. It will help to be confident and a good communicator, with the ability to stay cool and calm. Being a driver is essential as Rob has his own car.

How to apply....

Closing date 26th April 2010. For further information or to apply online visit www.mcch.co.uk or email us for an application form at jobs@mcch.co.uk alternatively call our recruitment line on 0845 600 1552. Please quote ref. NARROW DEFEAT: Blair Charge (pictured) scored two tries in the top of the table clash

Dover lose out to last gasp penalty

Gravesend 22 Dover 20

LONDON 1 South champions Gravesend dented Dover's hopes of securing a play-off spot as they condemned the Sharks to a narrow defeat at the weekend.

Dover started well and took the lead early on through Blair Charge. The full-back took advantage of a knock-on and stormed across the line for the first try of the afternoon, although he missed the conversion.

The visitors were reduced to 14 men following a nasty off-the-ball tackle, but it didn't stop them taking the lead minutes later. Dover's defence was breached with a swift attacking move and the league champions kicked the conversion to move into the lead.

Gravesend scored next and extended their lead with a try from a line-out deep in the 22.

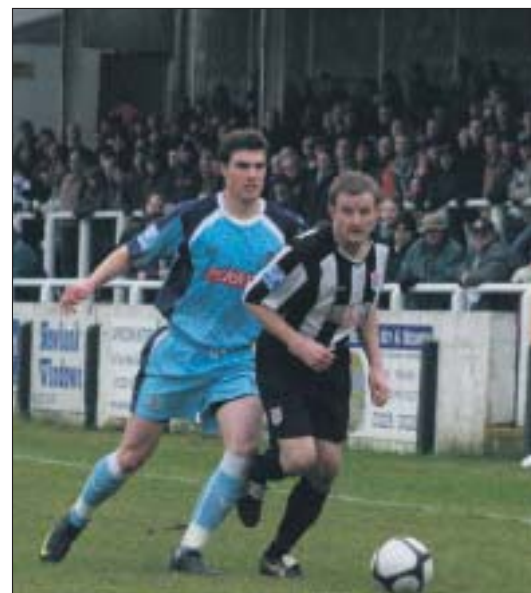

Dover upped their game and levelled just after the half-hour mark through Charge. Parity didn't last long as Gravesend added a third try and a penalty to take a seven-point lead.

A penalty from Charge cut the deficit and a try from Ricky Mackintosh saw Dover take the lead. With 11 minutes of injury time, Gravesend kept pushing forward and they snatched the win with a stunning 35-metre penalty.

PROMOTION HOPES: Nicky Southall, left, helped Dover secure their place in the play-offs, but the Whites will be without defender Daniel Leach, right, who was recalled by Barnet

DOVER Athletic secured their place in the Blue Square South play-offs after recording their eighth consecutive win against already relegated Weymouth on Saturday.

Goals in each half from Nicky Southall and Sammy Moore secured a comfortable win and ensured Dover will have an extension to their season and chance of promotion to the Blue Square Premier through the play-offs.

On Saturday, Dover started brightly and took the lead with nine minutes on the clock through Southall. A 30-yard free-kick from the former Gillingham player evaded strikers Adam Birchall and Shaun Welford before nestling into the bottom corner of the net.

Andy Hessenthaler's side dominated the game and Birchall and Welford both went close to extending the lead early in the second-half. However, the three points were wrapped up in the dying minutes when Moore's diving header from a Southall cross flew into the top corner.

A delighted Hessenthaler said: "It's pleasing as we have achieved what we set out to do at the start of the season. We didn't really envisage ourselves fighting for the title as it is only our first year in the division for some time. Now we have got a play-off spot I want us to go on and win the play-offs now."

The club were dealt a blow before the game when they got news defender Daniel Leach had been recalled from his loan spell by parent club Barnet.

Only last week, the League Two club announced both Leach and midfielder Joe Tabiri, also on-loan at Dover, would stay at the club for the remainder of the season. But an injury to Barnet centre-half Gary Breen forced manager Ian Hendon to call Leach back.

With two league games and the play-offs remaining, Hessenthaler admitted the loss of Leach is a blow, but believes he has defenders capable of stepping up.

Hessenthaler said: "It is a blow as he has been excellent since he joined us. He gave us that extra height in the area and I like to think he has gone back to Barnet an improved player. I know Barnet manager Ian Hendon really well and he wouldn't have called him back unless he really needed him. We have still got options at the back with Dean Hill and Jake Leberl. Craig Cloke, who did very well on Saturday, can also play there."

The Whites travel to league champions Newport County this Saturday, hoping to end the Welsh side's unbeaten home league record.

Cugley praises hot-shot striker for lifting Invicta

FOOTBALL

BY DAVID PRITCHARD

Whitstable Town 1

Lloyd 58

Folkestone Invicta 3

Cass 12 & 80, Smith pen 19

NEIL Cugley believes Brendon Cass has provided his Folkestone Invicta side with a boost at just the right time in their promotion push.

The striker made it seven goals in nine league games since joining from Chatham Town last month, after scoring a brace to see off Whitstable Town on Saturday.

The Seaside's success this season has been based around a rock solid defence, but Cass' arrival has given them an extra cutting edge up front. Cugley is delighted the switch has paid off.

He said: "It was hard to get it sorted out when he came because of the financial problems at the club. Obviously it's proven to be a nice one for us. Originally it was just short term but we've carried it on. He's taking his chances, they've not always been great goals but they all count and our biggest problem this season has been not scoring enough goals.

"Having Brendon around has helped a lot. If we hadn't got him in I don't think we'd be anywhere near as high in the league because we'd have run out of numbers. On Saturday we didn't have Simon Austin or Pete Williams, so without Brendon we'd have struggled to put a quality side out."

With Ryman South leaders Croydon opening up a four-point lead last week, Invicta could ill-afford a slip-up at relegation-threatened Whitstable.

A potential banana skin, the trip to the Belmont was made much more straightforward as the visitors took a 2-0 lead inside 20 minutes. Cass scored the first with a shot which deflected wickedly past Oystermen goalkeeper Kevin Fewell. Darren Smith added the second from the penalty spot after Dave Cory was penalised for a handball.

Folkestone Invicta starting XI

Subs used: Guiver (Burchell 85), Sargeant (Jackson 85), Henson (J Everitt 90)

Whitstable pulled a goal back just before the hour to make life uncomfortable for Folkestone, but Cass' second of the afternoon ten minutes from time sealed victory.

It was the first of four games in a potentially decisive eight days for Invicta, who visit Walton & Hersham tomorrow ahead of a trip to Ramsgate on Saturday. They hosted Whyteleafe last night, log on to www.your-shepway.co.uk for the details.

If they come through those tests with their title ambitions still intact it would set up a mouth-watering clash with Croydon at Cheriton Road next Tuesday. There should be a bumper crowd for the game after Invicta made it free entry as part of a tribute to Rifleman Peter Aldridge, who died on duty in Afghanistan earlier this year.

Defensive mix-up costs Hythe in duel with rivals

FOOTBALL

Hythe Town 0 Herne Bay 2

HYTHE Town were unable to spoil Herne Bay's Kent League title hopes as they went down to a Stuart King brace on Saturday.

After being drawn against each other in the FA Vase and Kent League Cup, last weekend's game was the fifth meeting of the season between the two clubs. In the reverse fixture last month two goals in the dying minutes saw Hythe come from behind to beat Bay and dent their championship aspirations, but the visitors had their revenge on Saturday.

The home side were on the back foot early on as Bay made a fast start. Town looked to have weathered the storm but the pressure eventually told as the breakthrough came 12 minutes before the break. A long ball was flicked on for Byron Walker, whose path to goal was blocked, but the ball broke kindly for King to break through and steer the ball home.

The advantage was doubled five minutes into the second-half, but again it had an element of misfortune for the hosts. An innocuous through ball led to a defensive mix-up which resulted in a hurried clearance hitting King, who had the simplest of tasks to tap into an empty net.

Hythe are next in action this Saturday, when they visit the division's basement side, Lordswood. It is the start of four games in ten days to finish the season, with a top-four finish on the cards if Hythe can end the campaign on a high note.

CHALLENGE: Hythe's Sam Marsh, in red, on Saturday

Kent cricket legends in visit to Deal Vics

TWO Kent cricket legends in Derek Underwood and John Shepherd were guests of honour at Deal Victoria and Barns Close Cricket Club's annual players' dinner last week.

They paid tribute to Fred Wilson, for whom this year will be his 50th as Deal Vics' club secretary.

Former England spinner Underwood, the president of MCC last year, said: "Fred has been a wonderful servant to this cricket club, and I think he must start thinking about Deal Vics from the moment he wakes up in the morning."

Some of the players who helped Vics to their double promotion success received individual awards on Friday. The Saturday first-team batting award went to Matt Carley and Scott McNamara won the bowling prize. The Saturday second-team batting award winner was Frank Packman, with Ian Bone taking the bowling award.

Andy Furness claimed the Sunday 1st XI batting award and Graham McNamara was the top bowler. The Sunday second-team batting and bowling awards both went to Ian Bone.

Robbie Brannan won the Midweek XI batting award and the bowling trophy went to Graham McNamara. The Terri Shepherd Memorial Trophy for services to the club was awarded to Debbie Nightingale.

Deal Vics first-team will begin their first season in the Kent League at home to Blackheath 3rds on Saturday, May 8.

Stones end in victory

Hastings & Bexhill 24 Folkestone 46

FOLKESTONE'S good end of season form continued as they rattled off their third successive win at struggling Hastings & Bexhill.

The Stones made a blistering start and were 24-0 up inside 20 minutes thanks to tries from Richard Lama, Dan Sangiuseppe and two from John Eustace.

Jack McMurray added another before half-time, while further scores after the break from Adam Tolman and Will Turner saw off a spirited fight-back from the home side.
